How to fill out H-119 — Attestation of Transfer Notification to Joint Owner

/forms/connecticut/h119-attestation-of-transfer-joint-owner/

Connecticut · written against H-119 (New 10-2004), issued under Conn. Gen. Stat. s. 14-179(e), transfer by one of two or more joint owners, subscribed under penalty of false statement per s. 14-110 and s. 53a-157b

A small form for one specific stuck moment: the title says OR, the car is sold, and the other name on it cannot be got hold of. Connecticut's joint ownership carries the right of survivorship and needs only one signature to transfer - but the department still wants it on the record that the missing co-owner was told. This is that record, and it is the only Connecticut form whose scope is printed as a sentence directly under its own title.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank H-119 from the Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles at <https://portal.ct.gov/-/media/DMV/20/29/H119pdf.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	YOU	Title Number and Registration Plate Number	Two of the five identification boxes across the top. Watch out: The title number is printed on the certificate and noted on the registration. Give both numbers rather than one; this form has no address block to fall back on.
2	YOU	Vehicle Identification Number, Make, Year	The rest of the top row. Watch out: Copy the VIN from the certificate you are assigning, because this attestation will be read alongside it.
3	YOU	Owner's Name and Co-Owner's Name as on title	Both names, in the two boxes either side of the printed word OR. Watch out: The word between them is printed on the form because the form only works for OR titles. If yours says AND, stop here.
4	YOU	Name of Buyer, and the AND/OR tick if there are two	Who took the car, and how the new owners want their own names joined. Watch out: This tick sets up the same decision for the next sale. OR for a couple who want either of them to be able to sell it; AND where both should have to agree.
5	YOU	Unavailable or Deceased as of	One of two ticks, with a date box on the second and a requirement for a death certificate. Watch out: Unavailable is a statement that they were notified, not that they could not be found. Read the sentence above the ticks before choosing one.
6	YOU	Comments, and the signature row below it	The only free-text box on the sheet, with the printed rules for one signature, a printed name and a date underneath. Watch out: Use the comments box. A line saying how and when the other owner was notified turns an attestation into something an examiner can act on without ringing you. Then one signature, from whichever owner is present - no notary and no witness, because what carries the weight is the false statement certification printed above the line.

What gets this one rejected

- Using it on a title that says AND. The scope line restricts it to OR, and a common-ownership title needs every owner's signature or a probate document.
- Ticking DECEASED with no death certificate. The form's own parenthesis requires one.
- Ticking neither box. The attestation is that the non-signing owner was notified, and the two ticks are the only ways the form allows that to be true.
- Using it where the other owner is simply unwilling. Unavailable is not a synonym for refusing, and this form is an attestation made under the false statement penalty.
- Using it to transfer a vehicle that never had a title. On a non-titled car the transfer runs on a Q-1 and there is no title conjunction to rely on.
