How to fill out BDVR-108 — Odometer Mileage Statement

Michigan · written against BDVR-108 (Rev 08/26), issued under Section 233a of the Michigan Vehicle Code and 49 CFR part 580

</forms/michigan/bdvr-108-odometer-mileage-statement/>

The separate odometer disclosure, for when the certificate has no room for one. Michigan's own instruction is that the reading goes on the title; this is what you use when the title has no space provided, when the title is missing and a self-certification is going in instead, or when a lease is being bought out.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank BDVR-108 from the Michigan Department of State at <https://www.michigan.gov/sos/-/media/Project/Websites/sos/27lawensn/bdvr108.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	YOU	Year, make, model	The vehicle, across the top row. Watch out: Copy it from the title. This statement gets stapled to a transaction and read alongside a certificate, and the two have to describe the same car.
2	YOU	Vehicle identification number	The VIN, with body style in the box beside it. Watch out: Seventeen characters and no spaces. Federal law requires the disclosure to identify the vehicle, and the VIN is what does that.
3	YOU	I (we) certify that the odometer reading is	The reading, in whole miles, in the tall box on the left. Watch out: Digits exactly as shown in the vehicle, and no tenths. If your cluster shows a decimal, it does not come across to this form.
4	YOU	actual mileage	One of three: actual mileage, not actual mileage, or exceeds mechanical limits of odometer. Watch out: The second is not an admission of guilt, it is a disclosure - use it if the cluster was ever replaced. The third is for a five-digit odometer that has rolled over, which is rarer than people think.
5	YOU	Name of seller(s)	Your printed name, then the address, city, state and ZIP rows underneath it. Watch out: Every owner on the title signs. The form gives two signature rules on the same line because a vehicle in two names needs both of them.
6	YOU	Signature(s) of seller(s) and date	Your signature on the first rule, with the date of transfer in the box at the end of the row. Watch out: The date here is the date of sale, and it should match the one on the title assignment to the day.
7	BUYER	Name of purchaser(s)	The buyer's printed name and address, under the heading Purchaser's information. Watch out: The disclosure has to carry the buyer's current address as well as yours. A post-office box that the seller wrote in for speed is not it.
8	BUYER	Signature(s) of purchaser(s) and date	The buyer signs under the printed line acknowledging your certification, and dates it. Watch out: Get it before they leave. Chasing an acknowledgement afterwards means chasing the person who has already got the car.

What gets this one rejected

- Tenths. The instruction under the reading box could not be plainer, and a decimal point turns 88,417 miles into 8,841.7.
- Choosing none of the three certifications. The form marks the group check one, and an unticked row is not a disclosure.
- An estimate. The form carries its own two-line note: mileage cannot be corrected at a later date, do not estimate mileage.
- The buyer's half left blank. The acknowledgement line and the purchaser's signature are part of the statement, not an optional courtesy.
- Using the leased-vehicle reverse for an ordinary sale. That page asks for a lessor's agent and the date the statement was sent to the lessee, neither of which exists in a private sale.
