How to fill out 735-501 — Vehicle Bill of Sale

bill-of-sale/

One page, fifteen boxes, and the only Oregon document in this whole set that a seller can complete on their own doorstep without the certificate in front of them. It is a release of interest, not a receipt: DMV accepts it in place of a signature on the title where the person releasing cannot sign the title itself, and it is what a buyer is told to ask for when the name on the certificate is not the name of the person selling the car. It is also the form that prints the ten-day rule where a seller will actually see it.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank 735-501 from the Oregon Department of Transportation, Driver and Motor Vehicle Services Division at <https://www.oregon.gov/odot/Forms/DMV/501fill.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	YOU	Vehicle Identification Number	The full-width box across the top of the form, with a tick box beside it for a VIN that begins with the letters OR. Watch out: The OR box is for a DMV-assigned identification number — the kind issued to an assembled or reconstructed vehicle after an inspection. If your VIN came from a factory, leave it alone.
2	YOU	Plate Number, Year, Make, Title Number	Four boxes on the second row, describing the vehicle as the certificate describes it. Watch out: Any one of plate, VIN or title number is enough for DMV to identify the vehicle, but a bill of sale carrying all four is a bill of sale nobody has to ring you about.
3	YOU	I transfer all rights, title and interest ... to	The buyer's printed name, last, first, middle, and the date of purchase beside it. Watch out: That opening sentence is the part that makes this a release rather than a receipt. Cross it out or reword it and DMV is holding a document it cannot use.
4	YOU	Buyer's address	A full-width line under the buyer's name. Watch out: Take it off the licence they are showing you. You need the same address again within ten days, on the seller notice, and reconstructing it from memory is where sellers guess.
5	YOU	Printed name of seller and date of release	The first seller row. A printed name — or a business name, where the seller is a business — and the date interest is released. Watch out: Print it as the title has it. A release from a business needs the business name and an authorised representative's signature both, which is why the row's label names them separately.
6	YOU	Signature of seller	The signature line inside the first seller row. Watch out: Original ink, blue or black, and no photocopies — the note at the top of the form says exactly that. Hand-printing is acceptable; the handbook does not require cursive.
7	OTHER	The second seller row	A second printed name, date of release and signature, for a certificate issued in two names. Watch out: Left blank on a one-owner sale. If the front of the title shows two owners and only one signs anywhere, the transfer stops until the other releases — here or on their own document.
8	YOU	Seller's address	The last line on the form. Watch out: Give the address DMV has for you if you can. The department matches people by customer number and name, and an address it has never seen is one more thing for a clerk to reconcile.

What gets this one rejected

- A photocopy. The note at the top of the form says original seller's signature, no photocopies, and DMV's handbook allows a carbon copy on two documents in the entire system, neither of which is this one.
- A name struck through or whited out. Both are barred in the same printed note, and a correction has to be made on a Statement of Error or Erasure of a Name instead.
- No indication of what is being released. A release of interest has to say the seller is releasing all interest in the vehicle, which is what the form's own opening line does — a bill of sale that only records a price is not a release.
- No vehicle description. DMV requires at least the plate number, the vehicle identification number or the title number, and a document with none of the three cannot be matched to a record.
- No date of sale, which is the date both the ten-day and the thirty-day clocks run from.
- An invoice, a purchase agreement or a purchase order offered instead. The handbook names all three and rejects all three.
