A half-page release, signed by the lender rather than by you, for the case where the loan is paid off and the certificate does not show it. Oregon's ordinary route is different — the security interest holder signs the front of the title itself, on one of two lines marked SIGNATURE AND COUNTERSIGNATURE OF SECURITY INTEREST HOLDER OR LESSOR RELEASING ALL INTEREST — so this form is what you ask for when the lender no longer has the title, or has it and will not part with it, or released years ago and left the record standing.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank 735-524 from the Oregon Department of Transportation, Driver and Motor Vehicle Services Division at <https://www.oregon.gov/odot/Forms/DMV/524fill.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	LENDER	Vehicle identification number	The full-width box at the top of the block. Watch out: This is the field that ties the release to a record. A release of interest with no vehicle identification on it is not one DMV can use, whoever signed it.
2	LENDER	Year, make, body style	Three boxes on the second row, describing the vehicle as the title describes it. Watch out: Body style is the certificate's own word — the front of an Oregon title has a STYLE box, and copying from there avoids an argument about what a wagon is.
3	LENDER	Type or print name of registered owner(s) to whom loan was made	The borrower, not the lender. Usually you. Watch out: If the loan was in two names and the title is in two names, both belong on this line — the release has to match the record it is clearing.
4	LENDER	Type, print or stamp name of security interest holder releasing all interest	The deep block in the middle of the form, with an instruction to financial institutions to use a unique line stamp. Watch out: A signature on its own is not a business release. The handbook wants the business name and an authorised representative's signature together, and the line stamp is how most lenders do it.
5	LENDER	Authorized signature releasing interest	One line, marked with an X, signed by somebody with authority at the lender. Watch out: Original ink on the copy that reaches DMV. A scan emailed to you is fine for your own peace of mind and is not the document the department will accept.
6	LENDER	Date signed (MM/DD/YYYY)	The last box on the form. Watch out: Undated releases come back. It is one of the four things Chapter E requires of any release of interest, and it is the one lenders skip.

What gets this one rejected

- A signature with no printed or stamped lender name beside it. A release from a business has to be signed with both the business name and the signature of an authorised representative.
- A photocopy. DMV requires the original release to accompany a transaction, and this is not one of the two documents it will take a carbon copy of.
- A release naming the wrong party. Where the lender on the title is a business, the release has to come from that business, and where the title reads John Doe DBA Ajax Autos the handbook treats John Doe as the owner.
- A vehicle described by make and model only. Any release of interest has to carry at least the plate number, the vehicle identification number or the title number.
- No date. Chapter E lists the date among the things every release of interest must contain.
