An odometer statement is not available from any previous owner. Therefore, I am submitting the following declaration with my application for a Utah title.

Odometer reading (no tenths): 214,806
Reading is: ☒ Miles ☐ Kilometers (kilometers will be converted to miles on the title)

I certify that the odometer reading is (check one):

I state that am solely responsible for any liability that may result from issuing this title, that the Tax Commission and its agents do not share any responsibility, and that I will pay the cost of any connected legal action.

How to fill out TC-893 — Owner's Odometer Declaration

Utah · written against TC-893 (Rev 4/26), issued under Utah Code 41-1a-902

</forms/utah/tc893-owners-odometer-declaration/>

The form for the mileage nobody can vouch for. Its opening sentences are the whole of it: I recently acquired the vehicle shown above and am now the legal owner, and an odometer statement is not available from any previous owner. It is signed by the new owner rather than by a seller, and the reading it carries is printed onto the title - which is why the paragraph above the signature transfers every consequence of that onto the person signing.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank TC-893 from the Utah State Tax Commission, Motor Vehicle Division at <https://files.tax.utah.gov/tax/forms/current/tc-893.pdf> — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	BUYER	The vehicle	Year, make, model and identification number, across the top rule. Watch out: This form usually travels with an ownership statement about a vehicle with no paper history, so the identification number here is the one from the inspection certificate.
2	BUYER	The reading	What the instrument shows, in whole numbers, with the miles or kilometers tick. Watch out: Write what it reads today. You are not being asked to estimate what the vehicle has actually travelled - that is what the certification box is for.
3	BUYER	One certification of three	The same three-way choice every Utah mileage block carries, ticked once. Watch out: If you cannot trace the vehicle's history, not the actual mileage is the answer. Choosing actual mileage because it looks better is the false statement the foot of the form warns about.
4	BUYER	Printed name and address	The new owner in block capitals, with the address the vehicle will be registered at. Watch out: The form asks for it printed as well as signed because the reading will be attributed to this person on a public record for the life of the vehicle.
5	BUYER	Signature and date	One signature under the indemnity paragraph. Watch out: Read that paragraph before signing. It says you are solely responsible for any liability resulting from the title being issued and that you will pay the cost of any connected legal action.

What gets this one rejected

- Filed by the seller. The declarations at the top are written in the voice of somebody who has just acquired the vehicle, and a seller signing one is describing themselves as the buyer.
- Used where the seller can be reached. If a previous owner can complete a disclosure, this form's central assertion is untrue.
- Two certification boxes ticked.
- A reading declared as actual mileage where the signer has no way of knowing. Not the actual mileage exists for exactly this case and is the honest answer.
- Left undated. The declaration is about a reading at a moment, and the moment is part of the claim.
- Used on a vehicle that is exempt anyway. A vehicle twenty years old or older discloses nothing, so declaring a mileage nobody can support puts a number on a title that need never have carried one.

☒ Amber is what you write ☐ Grey is a block somebody else completes The filled-in example is at the start of this sheet.
