The dealership counter's odometer sheet - the Division's forms index files it with (Dealers) in its name, and its top line asks for a customer's name and a stock no., which is dealership inventory language. A private seller meets it in one situation only: trading a car in, where you are the transferor whose sentence and signature it collects. It appears here because it is the first result a search for a West Virginia odometer form tends to surface, and filing it on a driveway sale substitutes a stock-control document for the disclosure the title itself should carry.

This sheet is not the form. Download the blank DMV-43 from the West Virginia Division of Motor Vehicles at https://webapps.transportation.wv.gov/TWS/WVDOTDocumentStorageMigration/PDF/Transportation/DMV/DMVFormSearch/DMV-43_Odometer-Disclosure-Statement_-_DEALERS.pdf — always take the current revision from the agency rather than a copy. Print this and keep it beside you while you complete theirs.

Every line, in the order you meet it

1	DEALER	Customer's name and stock no.	The dealership's deal reference - your name as their customer, and the number they file the trade-in under. Watch out: If you are completing this anywhere but a dealership counter, stop; the form has no role in a sale between individuals.
2	YOU	Transferor's statement	Your printed name into the sentence, the no-tenths reading, and a numbered box only for a true exception. Watch out: The second box's printed warning is the permanent one. On a trade-in it also moves money - a discrepancy reading reprises the deal on the spot.
3	YOU	Vehicle identification	Make, model, body type, VIN and year for the car being traded. Watch out: Read the VIN from the vehicle or the certificate, not the sales listing - the dealer's title work will be built on what this line says.
4	YOU	Transferor signature and address	Sign, print, and give your address and the date of statement. Watch out: The date should be the day the trade actually concludes. A statement dated before the deal exists certifies a reading nobody could yet rely on.
5	DEALER	Transferee block	The dealership signs and identifies itself as the receiving party. Watch out: Ask for a copy once both blocks are done. The original disappears into the deal jacket, and the copy is your record of exactly what was certified.

What gets this one rejected

- Standing in for the title's own disclosure on a private sale. Post-1990 West Virginia certificates carry the certification on their back, and that is where a driveway sale discloses.
- A reading that disagrees with the trade-in figure on the dealer's title work. The two are the same disclosure in two places, and the mismatch is the dealer's send-back.
- Both numbered certifications checked at once. One says the counter rolled over, the other says the number is simply wrong - they cannot both describe one odometer.
- An unsigned transferee block. The dealership acknowledges your disclosure the way a private buyer would; a half-executed sheet protects nobody.
- Tenths in the mileage. The sentence says no tenths, the same discipline every odometer document in this state applies.

☒ Amber is what you write ☐ Grey is a block somebody else completes The completed example follows overleaf.

ODOMETER DISCLOSURE STATEMENT

Federal law (and State law, if applicable) requires that you state the mileage upon transfer of ownership. Failure to complete or providing a false statement may result in fines and/or imprisonment.

I, Iris D. Vankirk (Transferor's name, print) state that the odometer now reads 76905 (no tenths) miles and to the best of my knowledge that it reflects the actual mileage of the vehicle described below, unless one of the following statements is checked.

2

☐ (1) I hereby certify that to the best of my knowledge the odometer reading reflects the amount of mileage in excess of its mechanical limits.

☐ (2) I hereby certify that the odometer reading is NOT the actual mileage.
